Yes, I'm deliberately commenting on North Yorkshire as a whole because there's no point messing about with boundaries as you want to, the truth of the matter is that the area covered by NYC is far too big and diverse. What chance of getting anything done is there when Whitby has 2 councillors, as have other small towns? With responsibility for an area stretching from the Yorkshire Coast almost to the Lancashire coast how can councillors who live well inland understand the complexities of problems experienced in a coastal town with a tidal river? Before everything gets totally out of hand tell the government that it's not working and it needs to be split into a minimum of 3 counties, North East, Central and North West. Then this questionnaire will be irrelevant.
