Related subject: Hemlington and Stainton, and North Ormesby and Boyds

I think splitting Hemlington in the way it's been done is a nonsense. Surely the whole of Hemlington, which is a defined community, should remain a two councillor ward and Stainton should gain a councillor to account for the growing community in new housing estates at the south of Acklam which would fall within this ward.

Also, hardly anyone in Middlesbrough uses the Boyds Estate name for the small area north of Brambles Farm. It would be much better for most of North Ormesby to join the proposed Pallister and Priestfields ward to make it a three councillor ward, and then move the small population on the Boyds Estate into the Brambles & Thorntree ward which it has more in common with.
