I feel you can reduce council members to 10: one for each off-island and six for St. Mary's. There were no elections last time around as they were not needed. The councilors are not elected by the public, and in a few years, when some councilors retire, there will be more open posts than councilors to elect. The community and public have a right to vote, and the number of councilors we have feels a little over the top considering that there are fewer than 1300 people living here.
