I believe the current boundaries of east Ecclesfield are wrong in two places. At its southern end it cuts the parson cross estate in two. This does not represent how people think of their area - ie one big estate. This could be fixed by extended the existing Southey ward up to (but not past) the existing parish boundary.

At its northern end Chapeltown and high Green are very much treated as one community and in terms of everyday lives no one locally recognises that distinction. Hence having lost some electorate to its south it could be rebalanced by gaining to its north.

I note you are left with Grenoside by itself in the old west ecclesfield. Perhaps this should join with warncliffe side and worrral to form a new ward?
