East and West Ecclesfield wards arr poorly split as the division is arbitrary and tends to split connected communities and join unconnected ones. In particular west Ecclesfield is very odd as grenoside and high green have very different population and needs and are particularly difficult to even travel between (on public transport you have to go into Chapel Town in East Ecclesfield for example). Burncross is basically integrated into Chapeltown now. I feel a better fit for the division would be north and south with high green burncross and part of Chapeltown forming a northern ward and Ecclesfield, Grenoside and the southern part of Chapeltown in a southern ward. Although even then Grenoside feels very different to the more urban conobation in the rest of the Ecclesfield parish ward and would be perhaps better paired with Oughtibridge forming and combined new ward especially as there are plans for a new tram stop in Oughtibridge which would serve both villages.
